Linda Moore was born and raised in Washington state, then moved to Northern Kentucky. She enjoys writing lighthearted stories, inspired by her grampa who always told the goofiest bedtime tales. Linda and her husband have five grown children who live nearby and like to get together to play games and eat yummy food. She likes to spend time gardening, baking, traveling, assembling jigsaw puzzles, and cuddling her orange-striped kitty, Leo (who's a lot like Freckles—and once ate a hole through a loaf of bread!).

Evonne Krell grew up on Vancouver Island in Western Canada. As a girl, she enjoyed walking to the beach to find baby crabs, collect shells, and throw rocks in the water. She also loved being read to by her parents and big brother, who used different voices for the books' characters. As a grown-up, she reads stories to children using funny voices for the characters just like her brother did. Evonne currently lives in Northern Kentucky.
